Responsibly produced textiles since 2003

We create responsibly produced textiles which combine timeless Nordic design with exquisite craftsmanship.

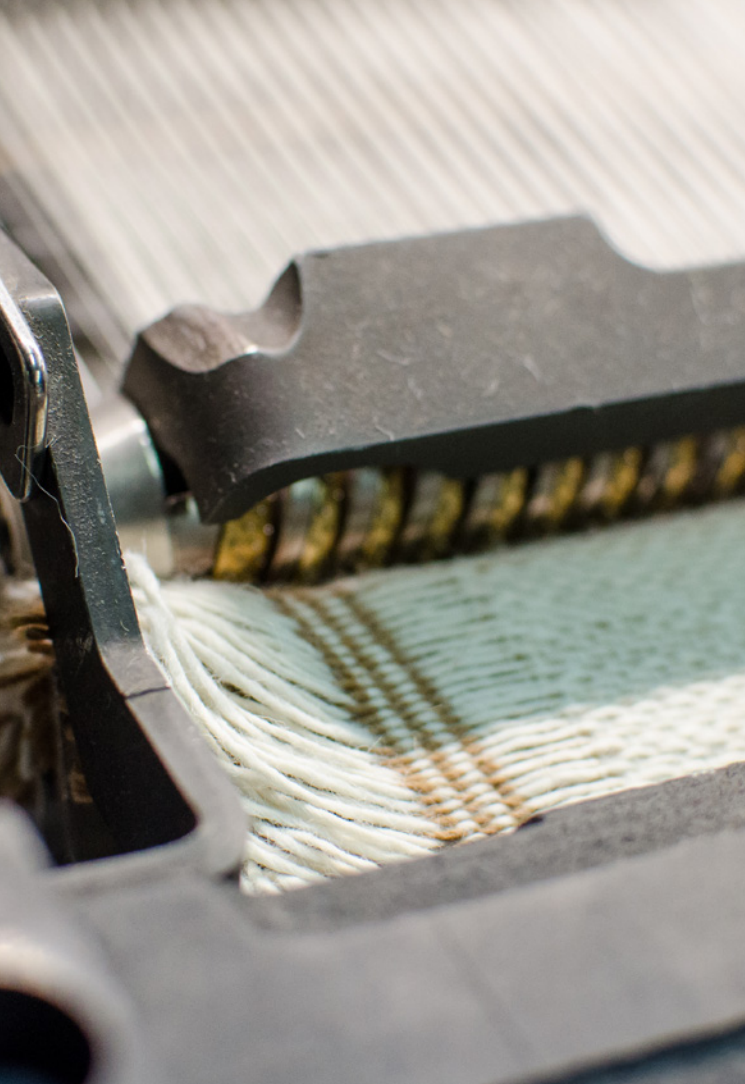

Our story is one of ethics, integrity and respect. It began in 2002, when we learned about the qualities of alpaca wool during a backpacking trip to Peru. Struck by its softness and durability, we set about blending elegant, pared-back aesthetics with centuries-old Peruvian weaving traditions, forging strong relationships with artisans, community projects and mills. A year later ELVANG was born, becoming the first company to introduce throws made of alpaca wool to Scandinavia.

Today, our collections are sold in numerous countries worldwide, but our social and environmental commitment remains unchanged. Making responsible choices lies at the heart of everything we do, from securing better pay for alpaca shepherds and employee benefits for weavers to reducing transport emissions, recycling packaging and repurposing fibres. This has led to the highest possible level of recognition within the World Fair Trade Organization (WFTO) as a Guaranteed Member and participation in the UN Global Compact Initiative, ensuring that our supply chains and business model put people, the planet and animals first.

Hope throws

"At Elvang, we are best known for our textiles produced under responsible conditions in Peru, but we have now chosen to expand our production with a small, compact collection of throws made by women in war-torn Ukraine. It has been named HOPE - because hope must be kept alive in a country where war, unemployment and poverty make women and children particularly vulnerable."

Hope is woven from 100% wool - a natural material that has countless advantages. First and foremost, sheep's wool is warm but also breathable, which allows for better heat regulation than is possible with synthetic fabrics. Furthermore, wool retains heat even if it's damp. In fact, wool can absorb as much as 30% moisture without affecting warmth.

Carte Postale throws Design by Inga Sempé

The Carte Postale collection is designed by Inga Sempé.

Carte Postale has a graphic pattern consisting only of dual-coloured surfaces that meet each other in the middle. The colours are clear, yet enigmatic; they run together like watercolours—a soft pink that fades into a bright red, or a blue that brightens more and more the closer it gets to the edge of the throw.

Horizon throws

The Horizon throw features a beautiful design with shimmering colors that transition elegantly and naturally from light to dark. It is a true piece of craftsmanship and a testament to the talent of Peruvian weavers.

The throw is woven from wonderfully soft recycled alpaca and sheep wool. Weaving alpaca wool textiles is a Peruvian tradition dating back to the time of the Incas. Alpaca fibers are softer, more durable, and warmer than other natural fibers. The throw sheds minimally and retains its beautiful appearance for many years.

Elvang is certified at the highest level by the World Fair Trade Organization (WFTO), ensuring that the throw is produced under fair conditions for people, animals, and the environment.
